

To my wife, Dr. Nah-Young Shin & my son, Edward Won Cho, who gave me lessons of life with smile, crying and love.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am deeply thankful to my advisor Dr. Michael P. Stone for his guidance with a great patience during this journey. He made me growing through this voyage. I was affected and encouraged by him. I am also grateful to my committee members: Drs. Carmelo J. Rizzo, Terry Lybrand, Sandra J. Rosenthal, and Chuck Sanders. They supported me with valuable questions and suggestions in our regular committee meetings. It was my honor to have many people who helped and taught me through the project. Drs. Thomas and Connie Harris, and their lab members helped me from the sample preparation and to many discussions. NMR was the main tool that I used for this journey, and there were Dr. Jason Jacob and Mr. Markus Voehler. They were my NMR gurus. I also would like to thank Dr. Hye-Young Kim who helped me in the beginning in Stone lab. Another help came from Dr. R. Stephen Lloyd and his group members who shared many biological studies about adducts with me and many questions during our meetings. I enjoyed the time with two senior members in Stone lab: Drs. Tandace Scholdberg and Keith W. Merrit. They were more than just friends. I deeply appreciate their good wishes on me. I cannot forget my other colleagues Drs. Kristina Furse and Angela Goodenough for their help and friendship. I also would like to appreciate my lab friends: Dr. Feng Wang, Mr. Kyle Brown, Dr. Hai Huang, Ms. Wen Xu, Dr. Ganesh Shanmugam, Dr. Yazhen Wang, Ms. Heather Day and Ms. Sarrah Musser who provided me a cozy lab environment with their pleasant smiles. Especially, Sarrah helped me for proofreading this dissertation. There were Korean friends who were with me during this journey. Dr. Young-Tae Lee was a special friend whom I met here. Along with Dr. Hak-

Jun Kim, we played tennis together and loved NMR. I was fortunate to have our neighbors, Dr. Ji-Woong Han and Ms. Iran No. Dr-to-be Min-Suk Kang became one of beloved friends while we were sharing graduate life. Drs. James McAfee and Iren Zegar were the people who encouraged me to start this journey from Pittsburg to here. And, my special thanks to Dr. Robert E. Venturella (Dr. Bob) should be addressed. He is my supporter and kept encouraging me from the beginning. Without his encouragement, it was impossible for such a shy Korean came to USA for doing his study.

My Nashville life was joyful. When we were suffered, there was a shelter, NKP church. It was good to have good people around us. I apologize if I missed anyone to express my thanks on this page.

Needless to say, my Ph. D could not be achieved without sacrifice of many people. I am so much in debt to my family: my parents, parents-in-laws, brother, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, grandmother, and late grandfather. They were always in my heart and made me strong. Especially, I wish to thank my wife, Nah-Young Shin and my son, Edward (Won). They joined my journey and they were always with me. They helped and feeded me so much with great loves. I hope that this journey was worthy of their sacrifice for me.

And finally, I thank God.
