The Cal Turner Program is pleased to invite you to the following faculty discussion:

"Mental Health Clinicians' Responses to Electronic Medical Records"

Privacy of health information impacts the work of many disciplines, none more than in psychiatry. We conducted an IRB-approved survey, "The Ethics of Information Isolation: Psychotherapists' Perceptions of the Ethics of Restricted Access to Computerized Psychiatric Records." Our findings suggest that, while the Electronic Medical Record was generally favorably viewed, it appears to affect how the things people tell us are documented. Providers believe that patients are very concerned about the content and visibility of their records, but providers think their patients are still divulging just as much. Conclusions will require further study. This brief talk present our preliminary data analysis, and will open a discussion of its implications for promoting better access to mental health care in the future.

Discussion Leader: Ron Salomon, School of Medicine

Date: Friday, April 7, 2006, 12:10-1:00 pm

Location: Light Hall, Room 407A

Lunch will be provided. Please make reservations.

These discussions are designed to bring together faculty from different professional schools to address issues that cut across the professions. These events provide the opportunity for faculty to learn about a range of moral and ethical issues that face the professions, including their own.
