MARK YOUR CALENDARS FOR THE MONDAY BEFORE CLASSES START!

King David as a biblical figure has generated centuries of historical investigation and imaginative interpretation. On January 12, 2004, graduate students in Vanderbilt's Hebrew Bible program will feature this fascinating phenomenon in our first annual Hebrew Bible Symposium: "Does Biblical History Have a Future? David as a test case for Historical Criticism." In addition to student papers and plenary discussion, the conference will offer two keynote speakers: Baruch Halpern of the University of Pennsylvania and Steven McKenzie of Rhodes College. Both are senior scholars in the field who have recently published books on David. Vanderbilt's own

Joel Harrington and Annalisa Azzoni will give responses.
The Sessions themselves are free to students. A nice Zoe's lunch is available at a $5.00 charge to students.
Brochures are forthcoming in your boxes.

Job Postings

At this point in time, I expect to be hiring two part-time student employees to begin working in the Spring semester. Hours will likely be 10-12 per week with more needed immediately for book rush, and other important days such as Customer Appreciation Days in March.

The preference is for students in their first or second year so as to minimize turnover and create continuity. If all works out, this can be a position held for the duration of your schooling here.

Please contact me by next Monday, December 8th if you are interested or want more information. I hope to have conversational interviews with people next week so hiring can take place before the holiday and schedules can be worked out now. Because of the luxury of two full-time people we have at this Cokesbury that many seminary stores do not have, I anticipate most school breaks being open for student employees. However, that will be discussed on a case by case basis.

If you have applied for a position here in the past and would like to again, please do so.

You can contact me via email, by phone (322-7230), or by stopping by the store.
