JOSÉ RAMOS-HORTA

Wednesday evening, October 4, 2000
Langford Auditorium

In 1975, Indonesia invaded the tiny country of East Timor and brutally slaughtered 200,000 of its citizens. For 25 years, the East Timorese movement for self-determination, led by José Ramos-Horta, has been met with violence, repression, and silence from the international community. But in 1999, the East Timorese unequivocally declared their independence. A passionate speaker, Ramos-Horta's unflinching commitment to peace shines through in every lecture. While his topics require deep reflection, he tempers his message with a wonderful sense of humor and a sharp political wit.
