Events at Virginia Tech prompt second look at university safety

Campus officials to discuss potential safety policy changes.

by ANNE MALINEE
Staff Reporter

The massacre at Virginia Tech on Monday that left 33 people dead has prompted Vanderbilt to take a second look at campus safety and emergency preparedness procedures.

"Any time you have an incident that occurs like that, either locally or nationally, it's always a good thing to reflect on your own protocols," said Marlon Lynch, chief of police for Vanderbilt University Police Department.

Lynch said he and other university officials will meet to discuss the university's plans for responding to emergencies, but they have not made any policy changes yet.

Vice Chancellor of Public Affairs Michael Schoenfeld said the university plans to release expanded security information for students and parents in the next few days.

"In general, Vanderbilt is an extraordinarily safe place," Schoenfeld said, but he noted the difficulty of controlling a large and open environment that includes both a university and a medical center.

"We are confident that we could deal with any eventuality, but that doesn't mean you can necessarily prevent it," he said.

VUPD publishes emergency response plans on its Web site, including what to do in the event of a bomb threat, a hostage situation or an armed gunman entering a building.

Schoenfeld said the university has communications protocol that includes methods such as e-mail and direct contact, and it is working to expand the use of text messaging to communicate with students.

Lynch said Vanderbilt police coordinate with the Nashville Police Department and have already been in contact with them regarding events in Virginia.

"We have the benefit of being in a metropolitan city, so we have a very strong working relationship with the metro police department," he said.

Lynch also said the police department already had plans to increase staffing levels this week due to Rites of Spring.

While Vanderbilt has never experienced a disaster like the massacre at Virginia Tech, Schoenfeld said the university has dealt with its share of crises, including a shooting in Morgan House residence hall that injured three students in fall 2005 and prompted the creation of a task force to address campus security.

Acting on the task force's recommendations, Lynch said, the university has increased education and community awareness through programs like Vanderbilt Visions and added more physical security features such as additional electronic card access readers in dormitories.

"The university does have both procedures and people who are very well trained, very skilled and very professional in dealing with a full range of crises," Schoenfeld said. "The Vanderbilt community has been through them in many different forms."

Lynch said the best thing students can do to promote safety is to watch out for their peers and tell someone if they observe suspicious behavior.

Schoenfeld agreed, saying community members' vigilance is key to keeping campus safe.

"It sounds like a cliché, but it's true. Safety and security (are) everybody's business here," Schoenfeld said. ■

Vanderbilt begins to respond to Virginia Tech shootings

by ANNE MALINEE
Staff Reporter

The Vanderbilt community will continue to respond to Monday's massacre at Virginia Tech with a memorial service, a day of remembrance and individual shows of support.

A memorial and candlelight service sponsored by the Middle Tennessee Chapter of the Virginia Tech Alumni Association will take place at Benton Chapel Wednesday at 7 p.m. Vanderbilt chaplains will lead the service, and representatives from Tennessee State University, Belmont University, Lipscomb University and Fisk University have been invited to speak.

Vanderbilt Student Government President Cara Bilotta said the university is planning a day of remembrance for Monday, April 23 that will include ribbons in Virginia Tech colors and a moment of silence.

Bilotta said students, faculty and staff will be able to write messages in a book for Virginia Tech on Thursday and Friday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Sarratt Promenade and Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The book will be available at the Sarratt welcome desk for students who cannot come by during those times but wish to sign.

Chancellor Gordon Gee issued a statement to the Vanderbilt community Monday night expressing support for the people of Virginia Tech and urging Vanderbilt to "continue to create and support conditions in which acts of violence like these are less likely to arise."

Gee said the Psychological and Counseling Center, Office of Religious Life and Affiliated Ministries, and the residence life staff are standing by to help students.

Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity hung a banner from its balcony Tuesday that said "We send our prayers to the victims + families of Virginia Tech."

Students formed Facebook groups such as "Vanderbilt Supports Virginia Tech," and some changed their profile pictures to logos with the Virginia Tech and Vanderbilt symbols.

Students, many of whom have connections to Virginia Tech, expressed their shock and sadness at the shootings.

"I'm so sorry that this happened to them, and I can't even imagine what it would be like to be in class and to know people were shooting outside or to come in and be in that situation," said sophomore Jessica Keener, who has a cousin at Virginia Tech.

Keener said her cousin was unharmed, but she is praying for her cousin's friend who was critically injured.

Sophomore Rachel Sinaiko found out through Facebook that a friend from high school, Mary Read, was killed in the shootings.

"I had seen that a lot of people had been asking about Mary, because no one had heard from her. And then, tonight [Monday], I found a Facebook group called 'Praying for Mary Read.'"

"I think that it's going to take a while for it to really sink in, but the fact that someone I know and someone that a lot of my friends were friends with, is gone, that makes it sink in faster because its more direct," Sinaiko said. Sinaiko is a reporter for The Hustler.

"One of my roommates, her best friend, the guy she took to prom, goes to Virginia Tech and was in a class in the Engineering building at the time of the shooting. He was the only kid in his class that didn't get shot," said junior Jill Coish.

"(My roommate) was bawling all day yesterday," Coish said. "It's been really hard, especially for people from that area. I have lot of sympathy for them."

Some students said the events in Virginia make them question their safety on Vanderbilt's campus.

"It makes me feel like something could actually happen. I mean, we have VUPD, but they have police officers, too, and nothing happened after the first shooting," said freshman Zachary Gilbert. "It shows there are cracks in the system."

Coish said she still feels safe on campus, however.

"I think we have a lot of police here at Vanderbilt and since the shooting last year (in Morgan House residence hall) I think they've done a good job to prevent anything like that from happening again," Coish said. "So I feel safe, but I know my parents are a little worried, especially since my little sister is coming next year as a freshman." ■

POYTHRESS: Variety of dining locations abound on campus

From POYTHRESS, page 4 combinations.

Worst feature: The danger of people handling food and putting it back.

CR: 7
In the other connecting section of Rand, we have CX2, clearly the most extreme place to eat on campus. If you feel like living on the wild side and flirting with dangerous levels of cholesterol, there is no place like CX2. From the hardcore music to the various sports stickers, no environment equals that of CX2.

Best feature: You don't have to eat at Wendy's to get fast food on the card!

Worst feature: You can never know how long food has been sitting out under the heat lamps.

CR: 5
Some might feel Stonehenge is merely a Corner Market poseur, but that's not true. The sandwiches are served hoagie style and the environment can give you a chance to get away from the bustle of Rand.

Best feature: The ice. Why don't they use that ice in all the soda machines?

Worst feature: The steaming process keeps it warm for a limited time, often turning cold and soggy mid sandwich.

CR: 7
Upstairs in Rand, we have The Pub, with a great balcony and a terrific light-up order alert. With private, roomy booths and the addition of syrup you can pour in your drink to make it more delicious, The Pub is a great location.

Best feature: Only place to get a steak on campus.

Worst feature: Dinner extras seem to be gradually disappearing.

CR: 8
Moving over to Branscomb, we have Ro-Tiki. It has that carefree tropical environment. Also, Ro-Tiki gives you a terrific chance to show off how hilarious you can be by coming up with clever little false names to enter into the machine, such as "Bigbird," and "Alzilla" and then snicker with your friends when your name is called.

Best feature: Meal plan pizzas and poking the computer monkey.

Worst feature: No immediate seating available.

CR: 6
Whether you're a weight-conscious girl, a health freak or just a pansy, Grins offers the alternative style of eating, with many healthy eating options. If you feel greased-out, check out the natural options here.

Best feature: Unbelievably good peanut butter/banana wraps.

Worst feature: Inescapable lack of meat.

CR: 7
On the opposite side of campus is Peabody's answer to Chef James, Cohen. Cohen has a wide selection of delicious entrees that are very filling, and also contains a large eating area.

Best feature: Tortellini Tuesday.

Worst feature: If you're not a sophomore or Peabody major, it's hard to motivate yourself to travel to this location.

CR: 10
Over in Towers, we have two restaurants in one room! This makes rushed eating an easier process as you can quickly scan for the shortest line. C.T. West gives various "western" style options, complete with pictures of cowboys and that classy saloon feeling, and has the option of the baked potato side, almost a meal in itself.

Best feature: Super sweet lemonade.
Worst feature: As a ribs connoisseur, I was devastated to see C.T. West's attempt.

CR: 8
On the other side, we have the classic Quizno's, also available in Highland quad. This provides a filling sandwich and also has those delicious snickerdoodle cookies, which are irresistible when toasted.

Best feature: Possibility of being served by Tom, the lovable and eccentric Quizno's manager.

Worst feature: When living in Towers or Highland, the food can start to get repetitive.

CR: 10
Now that you're a more informed eater, you're ready to get the most out of your meal plan. Enjoy the rest of the year!

—Justin Poythress is a sophomore in Peabody College.

MELTON: Vanderbilt downplays skeletons in its bowling bag

top 20 academic institution in a diverse, large city that is surrounded by successful Division I athletics. No other school offers that mix.

My question is whether the bowling team was best served by the decision to hire Williamson. Are the players improving as bowlers from high school through college? How does a recruiting-only coach help the players improve skills? How will we know any different when the main source of press about this team comes from the coach's father? If my mother wrote about me, I would be more respected than the Dalai Lama and Mother Theresa combined!

I feel slighted that there has been no recognition at all for those who worked hard to lay the groundwork for Vanderbilt bowling. There has been no personal or media acknowledgement of the work VUBowl members did. Further, the tournament we began has morphed into the Music City Classic; a tribute by keeping the name Bowlarama would have been a nice reminder. VUBowl was responsible for three of the original varsity bowlers, including last year's Student-Athlete of the Year at Vanderbilt. While the Williamsons were welcomed back to campus by a crowd, I am awake in the middle of the night writing my thoughts down because my contempt overwhelms my instinct to sleep.

The women earned their title and deserve the recognition. I want to make clear that I in no way seek to disparage their accomplishments. But they are Vanderbilt students, and I believe they recognize my intentions. My solace is in exposing the mismanagement of the athletic department by Student Life. Perhaps, to them, it is worth disenfranchising one alumnus. After all, I took my chemical engineering degree and taught high school. They won't be missing any donations from my meager salary. But students give their heart, energy and $160,000 to Vanderbilt. How will Vandy serve you when the "bubble" bursts?

—Joshua A. Melton is a 2003 graduate of the School of Engineering.

TOP 10 MOMENTS OF 2006-07

TYLER HAGEN/The Vanderbilt Hustler

#01 Bowlers make history

The third-seeded Commodores beat Maryland Eastern Shore 4-3 Saturday to win the NCAA Championship. They arrived in Nashville the next day to celebrate the school's first-ever national title.

With one of the most exciting years in Commodore history coming to a close, The Vanderbilt Hustler decided to vote on the 10 best moments, as well as hand out a few individual awards.

JONATHAN DIEZ/The Vanderbilt Hustler

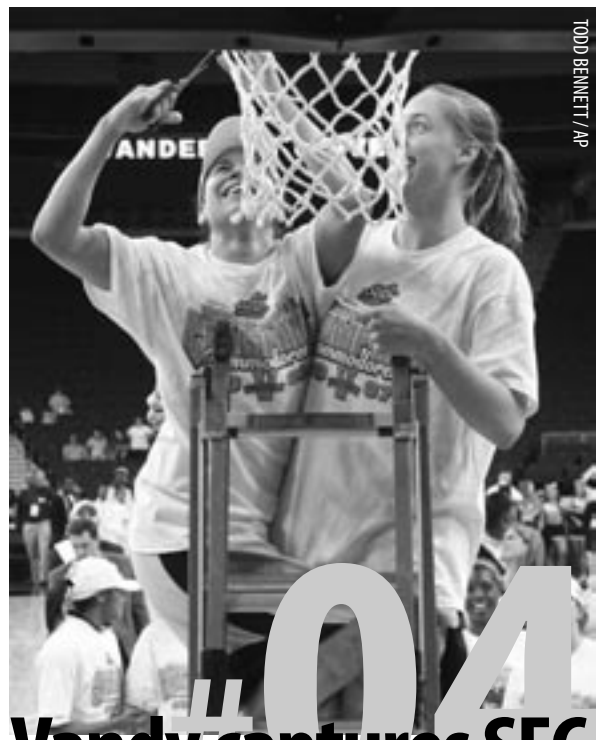

#02 Ain't Noah stoppin' us now

$25,000 was a small price to pay for upsetting the No. 1 Gators. Fans broke SEC rules by storming the court following their team's 83-70 victory. And who can forget coach Kevin Stallings' sideline altercation with the loveable Joakim Noah?

MARCO JOSE SANCHEZ/AP

In a classic game that will be relived for ages, the Commodores outlasted Washington State 78-74 in double overtime to advance to the Sweet 16 for the first time since 2004.

TODD BENNETT/AP

#04 Vandy captures SEC Tournament

As freshman, Dee Davis, Carla Thomas and Caroline Williams won the SEC Tournament. They did it again as seniors, this time defeating Louisiana State 51-45.

TODD BENNETT/AP

#05 Does down Dawgs between the hedges

Bryant Hahnfeldt's 33-yard field goal with two seconds remaining propelled Vandy past 16th-ranked Georgia 24-22. It was the Commodores' first road victory over a ranked opponent.

MASON HENSLEY/The Vanderbilt Hustler

#06 Baseball earns No. 1 ranking

Vandy won all three games at the Houston College Classic to start the season and hasn't looked back, earning its first ever No. 1 ranking. While the players aren't looking ahead, we can't help but think about Omaha.

#07 Foster's putback stuns Vols

Perhaps this was the game that started it all. The Commodores were on the verge of falling to 0-2 in the SEC when junior Shan Foster put back Derrick Byars' missed layup at the buzzer to give the hosts an 82-81 victory.

#08 Lacrosse wins wild one

Senior Kendall Thrift found the back of the net with 47 seconds remaining in the second overtime to lift the Commodores past American Lacrosse Conference rival Johns Hopkins 11-10.

#09 Women's golf takes two

In a span of a couple weeks last October, Vandy won a pair of prestigious tournaments — the Lady Tar Heel Invitational and the Stanford Women's Intercollegiate, proving that a national title isn't out of the question for

#10 Welcome back, swimmers

It had been 16 years, but the Vanderbilt swim team finally returned. The university was forced to drop the team due to inadequate facilities in 1990, but the Commodores came back this fall under the guidance of Jeremy Organ and competed admirably among the nation's elite.

MALE ATHLETE OF THE YEAR Derrick Byars

From his up-and-under dunk at home against Florida to his 27 points and game-saving blocked shot against Washington State, DeeBee did it all in his final season in the black and gold. There is no doubt the SEC Player of the Year, who also started a fashion trend by wearing one sock up and one down, will find success at the next level.

Runners-up: Earl Bennett, David Price

MASON HENSLEY / The Vanderbilt Hustler

WOMEN'S TEAM OF THE YEAR Bowling

This choice was a no-brainer as John Williamson's squad defeated Maryland Eastern Shore 4-3 to capture the school's first-ever national title. The third-year program, which finished 74-14 overall, looks to repeat next season as its top seven bowlers all return.

MEN'S TEAM OF THE YEAR Baseball

Regardless of what happens this summer, coach Tim Corbin's squad has much to be proud of. The Commodores became the first men's team in school history to earn a No. 1 ranking, and they currently find themselves atop the SEC East.

SURPRISE TEAM OF THE YEAR Men's Basketball

It's okay — you can admit it. After they started the season 1-3, you never imagined that Derrick Byars and company would end up one Jeff Green travel away from the Elite Eight. By sticking together and believing in themselves, the Commodores were able to go on a remarkable run that nobody around here will ever forget.

MALE FRESHMAN OF THE YEAR Mike Minor

MASON HENSLEY / The Vanderbilt Hustler

FEMALE ATHLETE OF THE YEAR Carla Thomas

TYLER HAGEN / The Vanderbilt Hustler

For the second time in her illustrious career, Thomas was named SEC Tournament Most Valuable Player. The senior was also picked 10th in the WNBA Draft after averaging 16.2 points per game and becoming a unanimous first-team All-SEC selection.
